Idaho Power must be reined in. Eminent Domain is not a right for big corporations with deep pockets and large litigation teams. IP doesn't even have permits at this stage for B2H!

Oregonians should not be faced with extensive legal fees to defend their land and homes, when monopoly utilities have endless financial and legal resources (often paid by rate-payers).

There is no valid reason to abandon or override existing regulations governing eminent domain. If so, this decision belongs in the legislature -- not in an agency's rulemaking authority!
